

Furrr-ever Pals

Puppy Yoga

By: Sonya Yeh

Summary

Puppy yoga is a type of yoga where each participant has a puppy as their partner.

It is the perfect activity for beginners and advanced ones! With your puppy partner, you will enjoy your stretches and practice a lot more. Puppy yoga also improves one's mental health. It impacts your mood by reducing stress and anxiety levels, and increases your sense of calm, helping you feel your best!

What Makes Furrever Pals Special?

Adoption over buying. Every puppy at Furrever Pals is sourced from local animal shelters and is available for adoption. Participants don't just attend a yoga class, they have the opportunity to find a lifelong companion. This partnership model gives shelter dogs a chance to connect with people in a positive, low-pressure environment.

Accessible wellness for everyone. Furrever Pals offers sessions across all experience levels, from first-timers to advanced practitioners. One-on-one personal training is also available for those who prefer a more tailored approach. The goal is to remove the barriers that keep people away from wellness spaces.

What Makes Furrever Pals Special?

Community connection: Loneliness is one of Vancouver's least talked-about challenges. Weekly sessions at Furrever Pals create natural opportunities for people to connect through shared joy. Puppies do the hard work for you.

Design-led experience. Every touchpoint of the Furrever Pals brand, from identity to physical space, was designed to feel warm, welcoming, and consistent.

What is Puppy Yoga?

Puppy yoga is a guided wellness practice where participants move through yoga poses alongside adoptable puppies. Sessions are designed to welcome all experience levels, from complete beginners to seasoned practitioners.

The concept draws on two well-established bodies of research. Regular yoga practice reduces cortisol levels, improves flexibility, and supports long-term mental health. Human-animal interaction has been shown to lower blood pressure, reduce anxiety, and increase oxytocin, the hormone associated with bonding and trust.

Together, these two elements create something neither could achieve alone: a wellness experience that is physically engaging, emotionally nourishing, and genuinely fun. Furrever Pals was designed to make that experience accessible to everyone in Vancouver.

About Us

Furrever Pals was founded on a straightforward belief: well-being should be joyful, not intimidating.

The brand was designed for Vancouverites who want to invest in their mental and physical health but find traditional wellness spaces too expensive, too serious, or too inaccessible. Furrever Pals lowers every barrier it can by offering beginner-friendly sessions, affordable pricing, and an environment where showing up is already half the achievement.

About Us

The name itself reflects the brand's dual promise. Furrever is a commitment to the puppies who pass through our doors, ensuring each one finds a home. Pals is a commitment to the people, building a community where connection happens naturally, one downward dog at a time.

Style Guide

The colour palette was chosen to balance energy with calm, deliberate tension that reflects what puppy yoga itself offers.

- Orange brings warmth and enthusiasm, signalling that this is a space for fun and movement.
- Mint/Pastel green introduces tranquillity and trust, counterbalancing the playfulness with a sense of safety.
- Purple signifies loyalty and inspiration, drawn from both the puppies and the practice of yoga itself.
- Peach softens the overall palette and communicates goodwill, an important quality for a brand built around community.
- White and black anchor the system, ensuring legibility and professionalism across all applications.

The typography follows the same logic. Darumadrop One is rounded and friendly without feeling childish, making it readable across both digital and print applications. The overall typographic system was designed to feel approachable to a broad audience while remaining consistent and recognizable across all brand touchpoints.

Mood Board

The mood board is to showcase the overall vibes the yoga is supposed to be. There will be a lot of focuses on meditation, yoga and connect with nature, as well as collaborate with pure animals looking toward their inner zen as well.

I want to use something that is both playful and energetic since the theme is about yoga/meditation with dogs. With the selected fonts, it demonstrates the positive energy yoga/meditation gives, as well as the purity that puppies tend to give off.

The fonts I will be using are Annal MN and HanziPen TC because they both have a young and jolly feeling when looking at them.

Here are the colors I plan on using:

- Orange: Energy
- Baby Blue: Royalty, Tranquility
- White: Purity, Honesty, Beginnings
- Peach: Goodwill, Joy
- Blue-Violet: Loyalty, Intelligence, Inspiration

A mood board is a visual collage of images, colours, and text that communicates the feeling of a brand before a single logo is drawn. It is one of the most important early steps in any branding project because it aligns intention with aesthetics.

This mood board was built around four themes: companionship, movement, nature, and calm. The images were chosen to reflect the dual experience Furrever Pals offers: the physical energy of yoga and the emotional warmth of being with a dog.

The soft edges, rounded layouts, and warm tones throughout the board directly informed the final visual identity. Every colour in the palette and every curve in the logo can be traced back to a decision made at this stage.

Mind Map

The mind map is to assist with brainstorming ideas visually. Mind maps are similar to mood boards, but mind maps have more text and information than mood boards. This mind map consists of information for audiences to learn more about Furrever Pals.

Build Approach

Furrever Pals was built in HTML, CSS, and JavaScript, deliberately, not by default. HTML and CSS were the first languages I learned, and returning to them here felt right for a five page brand site with no complex state to manage.

The separation between structure, style, and behaviour keeps the codebase organized in a way that mirrors how I think about design systems: each layer doing one job clearly, rather than blending concerns the way a framework often does. Where interaction needed real logic, plain JavaScript handled it directly, DOM manipulation through `querySelectorAll` and `classList` rather than a library managing state on my behalf.

Adoption FAQ

Is there an age restriction to adopt?

All adopters must be 19 years of age or older. Those under 19 are welcome to adopt with a parent or legal guardian as the primary applicant.

Are there any requirements for the living space we are bringing the puppies back to?

v

I submitted my application! What's next?

v

How long does the application time take?

v

I don't see the puppy I fell in love with in the Puppy List anymore, why is that?

v

If you feel like you are the perfect match for the puppy of your choice, please fill out the application form below. We appreciate your interest and cannot wait to help you find your forever friend!

Application Form

Some of the site's interactions are simple by design. The FAQ accordion closes every open item before opening the one clicked, so only one answer shows at a time, a small rule that keeps the page from feeling cluttered as people click through.

Other pieces needed more thought. The reviews carousel had to work differently on mobile and desktop, showing one card at a time on a phone screen versus three side by side on desktop, so I built it to recalculate its own layout on load and on resize rather than relying on a fixed breakpoint that would eventually break. The hero carousel auto advances every four seconds, but if someone navigates manually, the timer resets so the next automatic slide does not feel like it is fighting the person's own input.

Development Process

For the scroll animations, I used an IntersectionObserver rather than listening for scroll events directly, since scroll listeners fire constantly and can hurt performance on a page with several fade in elements. Each element stops being observed once it has animated in, so the browser is not doing unnecessary work for something that only needed to happen once.

None of these were dramatic technical choices, but each one came from asking what the interaction actually needed rather than reaching for the first solution that would visually work.

Ideas Behind Furrever Pals

Vancouver faces growing mental health challenges driven by rising costs of living, housing pressures, and economic uncertainty, which are conditions that disproportionately affect young adults navigating early careers. Research consistently links financial stress to declining well-being, social isolation, and reduced quality of life.

Ideas Behind Furrever Pals

Furrever Pals was designed in direct response to this gap. The brief was to create a brand that addressed a genuine community need through design. Rather than defaulting to a conventional wellness concept, I identified an opportunity to combine physical health, mental well-being, social connection, and animal welfare into a single, accessible service.

Puppy yoga offered a uniquely human-centred solution, lowering the barrier to mindfulness practice through joy, playfulness, and the well-documented therapeutic benefits of human-animal interaction.

Adoption over Buying

Hundreds of thousands of pets are abandoned each year in Canada. Many never find homes. Furrever Pals was designed with this reality in mind.

Rather than sourcing puppies from breeders, Furrever Pals operates as an official partner with local animal shelters across Vancouver. Every puppy who participates in a session is available for adoption. The yoga class becomes something more of a natural, low-pressure environment where people and dogs can find each other.

Adoption over Buying

All Furrever Pals puppies arrive fully vaccinated and dewormed. If a participant finds their match during a session, they are welcome to take their new companion home that same day.

This model was not just an ethical choice, but was a design decision. It gives the brand a purpose that extends beyond the yoga mat and connects every session to something larger: the belief that every dog deserves a home, and every person deserves a companion.

See You

There!
